Water color painting of the Nobska Point Light. Lighthouses always seem to make for picturesque scenery and they are of interest to many people. This particular light has guarded one of the Cape's busiest sea lanes for more than one hundred years. It commands the narrow passage which cuts in front of the island of Martha's Vineyard. Painting by Donald Jason.

LIVING WITH YOUR HEART (a public service of Massachusetts Heart Association)

Why not run your house the lazy way? Especially since it's not only the most healthful way but the most efficient.

The fact is, despite the conglomeration of labor-saving gadgets available to housewives, most of them are working too hard. Science in homemaking is too often confined to the modern tools in the home, when hours and backache could be reduced if the approach to the job were better organized.

Heart Association programs originally conceived for the cardiac homemaker have been acclaimed by thousands of women in excellent health as offering useful, time and labor-saving shortcuts.

Begin with your posture. Sit, stand and walk with a straight back; this keeps your body in proper balance. Unbalanced, the body uses extra energy.

Plan the work schedule to be as painless as possible, by outlining roughly a week's work at a time. Note first the daily jobs, those to be done on specific days of the week, and those which must be done about once a week but at no specific time. Alternate light and heavy jobs, and enjoyable ones with those you consider drudgery. And be sure to allow enough time for frequent short rests.

Your kitchen is primarily a workshop - and in any well-ordered workshop organization is a must.

Try creating a mixing center in your kitchen, considering convenience rather than convention. Keep dishes, cooking utensils and supplies used most frequently in an area, within easy

FETED AT PRE-NUPTIAL SHOWER

Miss Alyce Marjory Gallerani was feted at a surprise pre-nuptial shower at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Peter Balzarini of Mary's Pond Road, Rochester. Hostesses for the shower were her future sister-in-law, Mrs. Irene Ducharme of New Bedford, and her sister, Miss Patricia Gallerani, of Wareham.

The guest of honor was seated in a pink and green decorated chair, and the many gifts were placed under an umbrella decorated in the same color scheme. Streamers of pink and green from which were suspended miniature umbrellas completed the decorations. A confetti bell was suspended over the guest of honor.

The three tiered shower cake, iced and made by Mrs. Oscar L. Norton, mother of the bridegroom-to-be, featured white swans with white alabaster columns separating the first and second layers, and a decorated doll on top.

The 65 guests honoring Miss Gallerani were present from Dartmouth, New Bedford, Acushnet, Carver, Wareham, Onset, Rochester, Bridgewater, Brockton, Boston and Providence, Rhode Island. Special guests were Miss Gallerani's mother, Mrs. Grace Gallerani, of Wareham, and Mrs. Norton.

The nuptials of Miss Gallerani and Oscar L. Norton, Jr. of Rochester will be held June 25th at St. Patrick's Church, Wareham, and the reception will be at the Ranch House, Buzzards Bay.

Miss Gallerani is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel L. Gallerani and Mr. Norton is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar L. Norton.

ROCHESTER RESIDENT INVENTS MACHINE

Russell P. Lawrence of Mendell Road, Rochester is one of Rochester's busy young men, and has come up with a better method of sanding cranberry bogs. After five years of hard work, trial and error method, Russ, as he is called by everyone, has invented a machine that cuts down on manpower, is efficient, quicker and cuts the cost to cranberry bog owners.

The machine is pulled either by a two-wheel tractor or small Farmall tractor. Both the tractors and the spreader have low pressure, low ply tires which are way oversized so that no damage results when they go on the cranberry bogs.

The spreader itself, which is Russ's invention, has a V-bottom, slanted straight sides, a roller which adjusts to release the sand desired and a wire mesh screen above which screens the sand in the overall operation.

The spreader holds a minimum of one and one-half yards of sand to a maximum two and one-half yards of sand. Weight is sacrificed so more sand can be carried and still not too heavy to damage the cranberry vines.

DO DRUGS COST TOO MUCH?
This question has been asked by every householder in the United States during recent months. The answer, of course is a very emphatic NO. Drugs do not cost; they pay. They pay the American public in added years of a more active, healthful, and productive life. During the past two decades, we have seen the introduction of many potent and effective pharmaceuticals. These new preparations have contributed greatly to the increased life expectancy we now enjoy. Certain diseases, such as mastoiditis, smallpox and tetanus have been virtually wiped out, and the mortality rate of infants and mothers has been dramatically reduced.

gate openings. Russ noted that under ideal conditions, two spreaders can sand three acres of cranberry bog per day.

The spreader is so constructed with a chain drive that when the tractor slows down, the speed of the sand released from the spreader is not cut down one bit. Both the tractor and spreader have their own set of gears.

Russ's invention is a definite improvement over the former method for sanding cranberry bogs. In the past, cranberry owners had men wheeling the sand in wheelbarrows on planks onto the bog and then the men would dump and then spread the sand. Another method was the use of "jalopys" which are cut down Model A's with dump bodies added.

Sanding is one of the most essential part of work that must be done every four or five years on cranberry bogs. The accomplishments of sanding are many and varied, and some of the things it provides is a new rooting medium. Vines on cranberry bogs are like house plants that have become potbound and must be given a new lease on life. Therefore one of the functions of sanding is to promote the growth of new roots. Another of its accomplishments is the burying of trash on the cranberry bog. Trash that collects on bogs tends to thin out the vines; therefore sanding buries the unwelcome deposits. Another reason for sanding and burying the trash is that the trash tends to harbor insects and disease injurious to the vines.

Indirectly the sanding also prunes the cranberry plants or vines by taking or knocking seroles, sugar and flour canisters. You'll find yourself taking fewer steps, working more rapidly and easily.

Your sink should be as centrally situated as possible; half of all a homemaker's kitchen trips are to and from the sink. Many sinks are too low and women do not work with straight backs, which incites fatigue. A wooden slatted rank under a dishpan can elevate your sink level inexpensively.

Another way to save time and energy is to have vertical shelf dividers for the storage of pot lids and shallow baking pans. You can double shelf areas by installing half-shelves for cups and glasses.

the undesirable portion of the vine and promoting new vigor.

In poorly drained cranberry bogs the sanding builds the level of the bog slightly higher creating a degree or two differences in the draining aspect.

Another benefit which is a benefit to cranberry bog owners is that sanding buries and kills young seedling weeds. Some owners feel that by sanding, the light reflects from the sand causing the underside of the vines to develop better. Another school of thought is when a cranberry bog has been freshly sanded, the sand itself holds the sun's rays and in case of frost gives off heat and protects the vines. Some of the functions of sanding benefit a cranberry bog directly and some are secondary but all owners agree on the benefit of having a bog sanded every four or five years.

Russ noted the best sand to be used in his spreader should be sharp. That term to a person in the sanding business means the sand must be free of clay, loam and when rubbed between the fingers must be sharp and gritty.

Russ noted that when sanding a cranberry bog that has poor drainage they use coarser sand rather than finer. Many cranberry bog owners have excellent supplies of water for flooding so that in the fall after picking, they are able to flood the bog and remove the trash. But, in cases where water supply is limited sanding provides the best method for burying the trash that accumulates through the years. Russ Lawrence has provided a method that has proved a boon to cranberry bog owners.

READING AND MUSICAL NUMBERS PRESENTED AT GRANGE

Miss Bertha Harvey, State Juvenile Grange Deputy, from Attleboro, was the honored guest of the Mattapoisett Juvenile Grange at their meeting held last Friday night at the Grange hall. Richard Rawcliffe, master, presided at the business meeting.

Plans to present a demonstration meeting and program at the Acushnet Grange on June 21st have been canceled because of the Center School graduation.

A party for Juvenile Grange members who will be graduated from Center School this year will be held soon. The committee to plan this party is comprised of Catherine Alves, Christine Benco, Joanne Farwell and Doris Fearing. Refreshment committee will be Barry Denham, Susan Bence, Christine Bence, Catherine Alves and David Rawcliffe. The committee met this week with the matron, Mrs. Helmuth Heuberger, Jr.

David Rawcliffe, agricultural chairman, distributed additional ornamental corn seed for planting. A thank you note was read from Mr. and Mrs. Albert Pemberton for the gift sent to them on their 50th wedding anniversary.

The Lecturer's march prize was won by Alan Vaughan.
